Mt rushmore weather in april

01-28-2012, 10:24 AM Location: here are 24,843 posts, read 31,756,811 times Reputation: 32496 We live in the Denver area, and have been wanting to visit Mount Rushmore for several years. We can't put it this summer, so we wonder whether it's worth it this way during spring break, the first week of April. I noticed Bear Country is closed at this time of year. We'd love to see Badlands Natl Park, Injured Knee, Durdwood, Crazy Horse. I'm just starting research, but I want to know the weather and attraction wise, is April a decent time of year to visit? Thank you in advance! 01-28-2012, 10:49 am 26500 posts, read 33,820,167 times Reputation: 23888 Banning any spring blizzards is a great time to visit. The monument is open all year round. 01-28-2012, 07:23 PM Location: Hot Springs 1299 posts, read 2,515,087 times Reputation: 1287 Spring weather can always be unstable, but I wouldn't worry too much about a full windstorm. Everything you mentioned will be available. 01-28-2012, 09:13 PM Location: Wyoming 9729 posts, read 18,522,190 times Reputation: 14663 Most commercial attractions will be closed before Memorial Day or weeks earlier, as well as many eateries, motels, etc. and I would be a little concerned about the blizzard. They don't last long in April, but they can dump a lot of snow in a day or two. March and April are the big months of snow in the Black Hills area. However, April is usually not a bad time to visit. Typical daytime highs will push 50F, but I plan to visit some of the indoor attractions in a few days when the weather is less than ideal - Jewel Cave near Caster and the mammoth site in Hot Springs are good to save for bad weather, and there are plenty more. Durdwood usually jumps all year round. If I were you, I'd follow the forecast before I leave, but this time of year usually sees waves of weather coming through quite regularly. Plan for a couple of days of bad weather each week throughout April, almost like hours. We spent a few days in mid-March at Caster State Park a few years ago. The weather was very good on the first day but turned windy and snowy that night. The motels, or at least the one we stayed at in Caster, seem to have been built more for summer weather than winter weather. We had a room with two rooms as my wife's teenage daughter was with us. We woke up the next morning to find that the daughter's room had no heat in it and the door obviously needed some stripping weather as there was a snow skid on foot inside it! LOL No complaints, though. We all had a great time and got tons of great wildlife photos in Caster State Park - bison, elk, Bighorn sheep, mountain goats, antelopes, deer, wild burros and dogs to mention a few. Here are some photos our daughter took on this trip, most of Caster State Park: Eye to Nature 01-29-2012, 05:03 05:03 Location: QUEENS, STATE NY 199 posts, read 372,980 times Reputation: 400 There is a good chance of snow at this time of year, and some roads in places like Caster State Park may be closed if you arrive immediately after the blizzard. As others have said, the tourist season doesn't start until Memorial Day, so some of the local tourist spots can be a bit deserted and the hill town is still closed for the season. Durdwood and Rapid City will be fine, but Sturgis, Hill City, Custer and Hot Springs won't. Keystone is likely to be half open, as the monument is open all year round. Even with half the tourist stuff closed during the season, I think you'll find it a worthwhile trip. The canyon of spearfishing and the trip around Mount Rushmore (routes 16/16A, 87, 89 and 244) reminded me of a lot of riding in Estes Park, very beautiful and picturesque. You have to face a lot of wild animals, Mount Rushmore will be there, like Crazy Horse, Badlands and Walls, Durdwood, Sylvain Lake and Needles, and most of the animal herds of Caster State Park. I returned to the area for a few days last March and still found plenty to keep me busy. 01-29-2012, 11:28 Location: Sector 001 7783 posts, read 7,226,858 times Reputation: 9068 I went in October. No one was anywhere. It was wonderful. Hotels were $35 per night in Rapid. April should be perfect, but you'll have to watch the weather forecast. It snowed my trek to the top of Harney and I was the only person on the way when I went both ways. It was just a snock, but the man was pretty. Photos of him in a carving of images. I would like to go again, and probably will be, in late May until early June. Is it green in mid-May or better to go in June? 01-29-2012, 04:38 PM Location: here 24,843 posts, read 31,756,811 times Reputation: 32496 Thank you for the information, all. I was expecting campsites and places like that to be closed, so I checked into some hotels in Caster yesterday. I was surprised to find no rooms available at best West or Comfort Inn. Are chain hotels like those closed too? I've never heard of it. Maybe we should stay in Rapid City. As for the weather, we used to keep an eye on it. March and April are big months of snow here too. 01-29-2012, 05:01 PM Location: Wyoming 9729 posts, read 18,522,190 times Reputation: 14663 Caster is really another city during the tourist season, more than most in the mountains. A fast city will certainly work; it is close to any of the black hills attractions. Durdwood would be a good place, too, because you still want to see him. Underwater Fish and Lead also has some nice hotels that would be open. 01-29-2012, 08:21 PM Location: here 24,843 posts, 31,756,811 times Reputation: 32496 Yesterday I had this experience when checking the hotel's availability starting March 30: Quote: Originally published by Kibbiekat Thank you for the information, everything. I just checked out these sites and the drop down menu only goes on March 29 and then starts again on April 1st. I'll call some places to see what happened, but does anyone know why I have so many problems finding a room for March 30-31?? Previous thread Next thread Page 2 I thought I'd be back with an update. We spent 3 nights at Keystone. For what we wanted to do, Keystone was a good central location. The city itself had nothing to write home about IMO. We are more interested in natural attractions than humans, so we haven't missed things that are still closed during the season. We've seen Mount Rushmore, Durdwood, Caster State Park, Wind Cave, Mammoth Site and Bellands. We had a few days of good weather and one day quite cruddy weather. I think I'm probably enjoying this slower time of year than I would have been busy the summer season. Even with one bad weather day, I think we got very lucky. All in all, a good trip! Thank you for your advice! Page 3 09-22-2015, 11:29 pm 2 posts, read 1097 times Reputation: 10 Hi we are from Sydney Australia. We will be traveling to Los Angeles 2016 arriving Friday April 8th departure on Tuesday April 19. Our plan was to go see Mount Rushmore/Crazy Horse, etc. Can anyone help us find a tour that does such a tour from Denver or Rapid City? 09-23-2015, 07:26 AM 26,589 posts, read 34,030,458 times Reputation: 23990 Quote: Originally published by DiKilby Hi we are from Sydney Australia. Their some local companies that do the tour bit, they usually start their work in mid-May. 09-26-2015, 03:26 PM Location: unhappiness 3383 read 3,841,570 times Reputation: 3907 Went to Caster in May.
